HEALTH CARE JOB EXPLOSION!

The health services job market is EXPLODING! Employment in health care is projected to increase 30% through 2014. If you turn to the "Help Wanted" pages in any newspaper, in most cases, the largest number of listings will be for medical-related positions.

- Thirteen of the 20 fastest growing occupations are concentrated in health services.
- The Bureau of Labor Statistics projects health and social services will generate 4,300,000 NEW JOBS.
- Nineteen percent of all job growth from 2004-2014 will be in health care services.

Most don't realize that the majority of jobs in health services require less than 4 years of college education. "The range of options, necessary skills, and training opportunities is amazing," Dennis Damp, the author of Health Care Job Explosion, quickly points out. "This diversity creates opportunities for almost anyone. There are entry level positions requiring only a high school diploma up to physicians who must complete 4 years of medical school plus graduate medical education."

America's demographics are changing medical care delivery. The average age of the American population will continue to increase through the year 2014 with the largest projected increases (21.2%) occurring in the 55 and older age group. Sources of new jobs will be in the rehabilitation field, health and fitness, imaging technology, home care, nutrition, new diagnostic services, and prevention. The home health care market alone is projected to grow 66% by 2014.

The opportunities appear endless when you consider there are 460,000 health care establishments nationwide, 4,300,000 projected new jobs, and occupational growth averaging 30.3%.
